LATER information makes us return to the subject of the rumours that the Empress Dowager Tschsi intends to resign. It seems that she really has been contemplating the step for some considerable time, but always drew back when the time for putting the step in practice came, so that her present seeming determination must be accepted with many reservations. That she would like to avoid the working necessities of rulership is likely enough, but that she could be induced to take her hand off the has made many mistakes which have tiller after having held it for so many years | cost the country large sums of money to in the last degree unlikely. The desire for possessed of two qualities, rare amongst power is probably the last that dies out in | Chinese officials, which have obtained the human subject, and probably the for him the good will of the empire -Dowager's resignation will simply imply rulers and people alike—to a degree not that, while things go on to her entire entisfaction, she will permit others to do the work, but as soon as she finds her ideas crossed in any one particular she will return, and attempt to jerk back the machine of state into its old settled groove. Meanwhile, according to private reports from people in a position to judge, the Emperor's state of health both bodily and mentally is fairly sitisfactory, and there is no reason to anticipate a shorter term of life than falls to ordinary mortals, and this may throw light on the manifest unwillingness on the part of both the Empress Dowager and the Emperor himself to appoint a crown prince, without attributing it to any dark scheme on the part of either. There is in fact at the moment no eligible prince of sufficient age to have a character formed, and the nomination of an infant, and his almost necessary segregation from seem that so strunch a conservative as the outside world, would probably result in | CHANG would have few sympathies with as worse evils than leaving him to grow up and | ardent an innovator as Yuan; yet there is mix freely with his contemporaries. Since one great point in common between the men, the time of Kienlung no Emperor has had | unlike in other particulars, and that is that an opportunity of moving about and seeing | both alike in their various ways are patriotic, his empire, or making acquiintance with and both alike feel from their judividual his people, and the natural result has been that the empire fell to debauched and incapable princes like Kiaking or Hierlung, administrator, finds that he can well take Tackwang was possibly an exception to the | council with the older man, who will certainrule of degeneracy, but his failure to know | Ly advise no hasty steps, yet whose life-long what was going on in his empire, as well as experience has enabled him independently his utter unacquaintance with the onter to diagnose many of the causes of China's world, brought on the war of 1842 with its | present, paralysis. The invitation, then, disastrous effects to the dynasty. Did the resignation become a real fact it would Peking, and his promotion to the Grand probably be the wisest thing for the Emperor to imitate the rôle of Kienlung, and initiate a progress through his estates. which would enable him to see both sides | ed of the impossibility of continuing in the of the questions at present dividing the old groove, and that some radical change Empire, as well as improve his bodily in head quarters is importing. Remour health. Physically he can by rail visit has it that Prince Chun, whom we have the chief cities of Chili, Honau and Hupeh, seen ourselves, and whose visit to Europe and from Wuchang he can arrange to go | under somewhat humilating conditions will on one of his own vessels down the Yang. have convinced him that something is tse, and back along the coast to Tientsin, so missing, will be appointed to a position that the journey would not, even if he corresponding to Prime Minister, or Chandeclined to follow the example of his great cellor, and all these may be accepted as progenitor, be a severe one. These rumours | indications that something more than mere of resignation are curiously coupled with words is intended, and that the party the advance in power and influence of working for reform of the worst abuses are YUAN SHIKAI, the able Viceroy of the now in the ascendant, Metropolitan province. Two years ago, there was apparent a very decided attempt to set uside Yuan, and various men were tried, and to all appearance his fall half come. Little by little he was deprived of honours and emoluments; like a wise man Yuan held his tougue, and made no complaint. The result justified his discernment. As a fact the new men placed in various positions to supersede or check YUAN have not answered to the expectations formed of them by the Viceroy's enemies; and his power, temporarily checked, has recently been reviving. Though not a reformer in the usual acceptation of the word, Yuan sees very plainly that the old much ne needs repair and oiling, and he has been pressing changes, which seemingly do not fall in with the preconceptions of the Empress Downger. One of the foremost of these ideas is the appointment of a Cabinet in lieu of the old Grand Council. This may seem merely a matter of nomenclature, but in reality it is much more. The title of Gran I Councillor is one of the highest to which Chinese Officialdom can hope to attain, and as such it is confined, as a reward for past services, to men past the prime of life, and already falling into inactivity. The Cabinet on the other hand is meant to be composed of comparatively young men, men who have their spurs to win, and will not be afraid, nor be deterred by old associations from adopting a progressive attitude. To prevent it from falling into the hands of revolutionists it | Y.1,007, 00, leaving as available balance of is proposed that the head shall be a near relation of the Emperor, so that Imperial interests in the stability of the state shall not be forgotten. The new Cabinet is, indeed, intended to be a check on Emperor and Bureaucrat both, and is yet intended to have sufficient vitality of its own to be able to take the initiative in measures of reform. It is easy to understand why such a scheme does not altogether fall in with the ways of the imperious lady who has for the last thirty years swayed the affairs of China, and has permitted no one to stand in her way. More marked even, and probably fraught with grave consequences to the state is the approach that has recently taken place between the Viceroy of Chihli, and him of the Hukwang. CHANG CHITUNG has not been a model administrator, and unchillenged is, as we said the other day, set right. Withal he has shown himself attained by any other statesman of the day; he is eminently honest, and as eminently patriotic in the best sense. He has not, for instance, as the Lis and Shengs, made the holding of public office an occasion for personal aggrandisament, and on the other side, though perfectly friendly and just to the foreigner, he has in his relations sought only the advantage of his country. The effect of both of these is that no man through a long official career has been able to such a degree to win the confidence of Chinese and foreigner alike. So it has come about, contrary to the ordinary one. rule, that Chang's reputation is by no means to be considered as conferminous with his ability. In many respects, then, there is so marked a contrast butween the two men that at first sight their approach might seem unnatural, and it might even experiences that change of some sort has become a necessity. Yuan, as the abler sent to CHANG CHITTING to proceed to Secretariat, the highest rank attimable by an official, is an indication that the powers that he at Peking have at last been convinc-

A traveller from Changebung, Manchuria, who has just arrived in Tokyo, brought the news that heat in Manchuria this year has been extremely great, the thermometer reiding 100 to 103 degrees F. in the shade and from 120 to 140 degrees elsewhere. A long spell of drought had been experienced, and the crops of wheat and beans were spoiled. Mr. H. W. Looker (of Messrs. Descon, Looker and Descon). Invested for the defendant, said he wished to withdraw the plea of not guilty and plead guilty. The defendant was quite a boy, only 19 years of age, and had been employed for four and a half years as an interpreter in the police On the occasion in question there was no doubt that the defendant had endeavoured to obtain the sum of $5, but previous to this he had only a small sum, and on account of the accused's youth, Mr. Looker asked his Worship not to impose a heavy penalty. If a light punishment was inflected the defendant would be able to realise the enormity of his crime, and when his term of imprisonment was over would probably lead an honest and industrious life. be observed that we have adopted as slightly different form in stating our accounts'. for this ball year and, as the statement, together with the report, have been in your bands for some days, I will, with your permission, following our usual course, take them as read. The net profits for the half year ending 30th June 1907 amount to $401,396,92, and this amount includes the sum of $34,850, the difference between the book value of the tug Robert Cooke, and the amount realised under insurance policies. For purpose of comparison, I may mention that our not profit for the six months ending 31st December, 1906, amounted to $369,596,36; and $103,25641 for the corresponding period last year. Including the $400,93374, balance brought forward from last account, and deducting Directors' and Auditors' fees we have available for appropriation the sum of Arsenal Street, yesterday morning about ten $791,58).56, and subject to your concurrence, we propose to pay a dividend for the half year of 8 per cent, or $4.00 per share, absorbing $200,00000, place a further $100,000.00 to the credit of No. 1 Dock Extension Account and on the first, and twelve menths' imprisonment turned out with a couple of engines, but carry forward the balance $491,58056 to a new account, and we trust the distribution of profits in the meantime will meet with your approval. Street traffic in the neighbourhood is about to be proceeded with. The numerous orders that we have in hand for steam vessels proves the necessity for this extension. It is proposed to enclose the land at the back, the purchase of which was completed last year, and to remove the gate held at the Board Room, on the 30th July entrances, time offices and sundry out-buildings to the new ground, so as to leave space for the addition to the Boiler shop, and we have provided in the additional amount carried forward a sum sufficient to cover this expenditure. The value of "Material on hand" is about the same as in the last account, and you will be pleased to note that the amount due to Sundry Creditors is amiller by $184,435.46; though the reduction is partly due to the amount received from the underwriters on account of the Robert Cooke. Under existing circumstances your directors are of opinion that the figures before you may be considered satisfactory. After fully six months' trial of the conversion of the sawmill to electric drive, our sawmiller reports that an increased output of 40 per cent, is attained. and it is proposed to install a large frame saw. and to convert a hand power crans to electric drive, so that the saw mill may be on a par for efficiency with the other sections of the works. We are now beginning to get the full benefit of the electric power drive as the output approaches the capacity of the plant. Tho tonnage of the British and Foreignmen-of-war docked during the past six months shows a falling off, but on the other hand I am pleased to be able to report that the amount yesterday morning, another old and well-known of merchant ship tonnage shows a decided improvement, being 475,140 tons-the largest in any half year since 1900- which may be considered a hopeful sign, as this class of work is undoubtedly the backbone of our business. As mentioned in the report, must of the damage caused by the typhoon of last year has been made good, there only remaining a sum of Every effort is being made with a view of effecting economies, consistent with thorough efficiency, and in this connection. I would mention that a sub-committee of directors has been appointed and is now enquiring closely into the general working of the Company's business, dealing more especially with establishment charges, salaries, stock, and our buying agencies. The recommendations of the committee will be submitted to and dealt with by the full Board in due course. In the month of May, Mr. Wilson, lately Acting Chief Manager, went home on leave and Mr. R. IN CRIMINAL JURISDICTION. BEFORE THE CHIEF JUSTICE (SIR FRANCIS PIGGOTT).

WELCOME TO THE NEW ATTORNEY GENERAL.

The Court extended a welcome to the new Attorney-Gereral (the Hon. Mr. W. Rees Davis) who made his first official appearance.

The Chief Justice who, was accompanied by the Puisne Judge, said :- Mr. Attorney, Owing to circumstances, over which the Court has had no control, this is the first opportunity which we have had of welcoming you to the Colony officially. The delay, I think, will have had this advantage that I that you will believe the words of welcome are not formal but are personal and most cordial. We desire now to formally wish you a very useful visit and a prosperous career amongst us here.

The Attorney-General- I desire to express my cordial thanks to your Lordships for the kindly welcome which you have given me to the Bar this morning. The following jury was empanelled. Messrs. W. Brown, J. Von Riegen, S. G. Fenton. ad W. C. Drew.

H W. Page, L. E. Lammert, W. F. Gardiner The Attorney General in opening the case -said the affair took place in the public streets of the Colony on the 21st July last. The deceased was foreman in Messrs. Watson's Soda | Anderson; his height is said to be 5 ft. 10 or Water Factory where he had been for nearly a year. The three prisoners had also been employed in the same factory. For some time prior to the day of the murder there, had been some trouble between the deceased and certain of the employees over the way in which the work was being done, and in consequence two of the coolies drew their wages and left. On 18th July, three days later, when the deceased came ont of the factory he was surrounded by two groups of men, which included the prisoners. However the manager, Mr. Puddepha, came out and dispersed them, giving two of the men in charge. He saw one of the men strike the deceased, but he could not identify him. On the 20th July a quarrel too k place between the three prisoners and the deceased ontside the factory and one man was heard to say to the foreman "You need not be so sancy. Wait two more days and I will get some one to strike you." Nothinghappened until 10 o'clock in the m raing of the 21st, A number of men among which were the three prisoners were collected outside the factory and [as] the deceased man approached from the Hongkong Hotel there was a shout, "Here he is. That's he. Strike!" He was at once surrounded, but the factory employees. seeing what was happening, came to his assistance. The men ran off and the employees gave chase. The deceased ran after the second prisoner. Some blows were exchanged between them; the deceased according to one witness, striking the first blow. This was opposite the old King Edward Hotel. Whilst the two men were struggling, the first prisoner ran out from under the verandah and stabbed the deceased on the left side with a knife, which was distinctly seen in his hand. The first prisoner was recognised by one man who speaks to knowing him very well and to seeing the knife in his hand. The first and second prisoners ran away. Five men were arrested in all, and put on trial, but the evidence did not justify the indictment against two of them and they were discharged. He thought that the jury after hearing the evidence would find that the three men were there in all probability for an unlawful purpose, that | they were therefor the purpose of committing some act of assault or bodily harm upon the deceased. He submitted that the action of the first prisoner in rushing in and inflicting a deadly wound was clearly murder, and as regarded malies aforethought, which was the essence of murder, there was nothing to rebut regarded the other two prisoners, he submitted that they went to that place with the intention of assaulting the deceased. I'r. Heanley spoke to having examined the holy of the deceased. There was a wound on the left breast about one and a third inches long. Death was due to hemorrhage.

Other evidence was called. One witness satisfied that the witness spoke the truth, for he examined him only as to his later move:

Mr. Goldsmith, of the P.W.D. submitted plans showing the scene of the trayed y. The hearing was adjourned.

ADSETT.

Considerable doubt still centres round the custody of the man Adsettes. He is on board the U.S. "Galveston" and extradition difficulties are not unlikely.

The N. C. Daily News says the capture of Adsett will be a source of unmixed satisfaction to at least one resident of Shanghai, who during the past three days has been under temporary arrest no less than four times : once in the Astor Annexe by the River Police and at other times while appearing in the streets. These inconveniences were due principally to the fact that the unlucky resident was not well-known to the police and that he bore a certain resemblance to the advertised description of Adsett. On August 12th it said: Following the misleading telegram from the Hongkong police stating that the alleged murderer of the woman, Gertrude Dayton, had proceeded to Shanghai on board the steamer "Hongkeng Maru." a second telegram was received by the local police on Saturday at 3 p. m. saying that the man was on board the "Tosa which had arrived at Woosung about Maru" eight hours previously. Evidently the Hongkong police made further inquiries after learning that their quarry was not on the " Hongkong Maru" and so the second telegram arrived so late as to enable the offender to leave the steamer at Sir Henry Berkeley moved for the enrolment Woos ng hours before the local police received the second telegram; and no special supervision was made of arriving vessels because there were numerous steamers leaving Hongkong just after the "Hongkong Maru," and it did not appear likely that the man, defeated in his first intention of coming this way in a manner which drew suspicion towards him, would follow in the glare of that publicity. But it is frequently the unlikely which happens in such cases, and he has evidently reached Shangbai, where he is comparatively well-known owing to the fact that he engaged a boxing match with Mike Patou some montus ago at Tientein and after his defeat came to Shanghai.

On arrival at Woosung he left the steamer. company with a female passenger and came to Shanghai by rail. A carriage conveyed the two people to the Hotel des Colonies where, it is said. the man entered a ricsha and went away. Later not judicted. The Attorney General (instructed in the evening a man answering the description Berlin Hotel, Broadway, and has been traced to several other places at each of which he betray. ed a nervous restlessners and only stopped a few minutes. o doubt he has secured a good hiding place, probably by the assistance of friends. but there is every reason to believe that he is still in Shanghai and his ultimate arrest appears probable.

A reward of $500 has been offered by the autherities at Hongkog for information leading to the arrest of this man, who is known as Adsett, alias Jones, alias Jackson, alias Davies, alias 11 ins he is clean shaven, has fair hair and peculiar, noticeable-blue eyes he has three or four gold upper front teeth, which he shows a good deal in speaking and laughing. In age he is about thirty to thirty-five years. Adsett was formerly a marine in the American Legation Guard at Peking and he has resided at Tientsin. Chefoo, and Chin wangtao At Tientsin he was known as a pugilist. Heris carrying with him and is trying to dispose of a quantity of ladies' jewellery. Judging by the photograph Adautt has the appearance of a sailor and and is from eleven to twelve stone in weight.

On the 16th our contemporary remarked The question of his extradition to Hongkong for trial may prove a rather difficult one, and it is probable that the British and American Governments will directly communicate with each other on the subject.

A pail of ice and more bottles constituted the burden of the Great One, and the Doctor, entrusted with a dozen pounds of it, all but cost his bread upon the waters Luckily, it fell into the dingby. These and some half dozen more, assisted by Chinese servants, were provisioning a launch that was bound for a turtle-turning cruise. Turning turtle in nautical parlance means something disastrous; such, for instance, as happened to the dinghy when the Great One stood up in it; but this party was going to turn live turtles-if they found them. As the Pirate explained when the launch was under way, at flood tide the turtles crawl up the beach to lay their eggs. You concoal yourself, and when the amphibian seems to have come as far from the water as it means to. you rush forth, intercept its slow return, and render it hors de combat by turning on its back with a bamboo used as a lever. It is quite easy. All you have to do is to be very quiet. "Do not shou out to the others that you've got one, or any adjectival nonsense of that sort. You will scare the others away if you do." This earnest a dvice was certainly taken seriously. Not one member of the party committed the indiscretion of shouting out that he'd got one. Arrived in a certain bay many miles away, in Chinese waters, the sportsmen filed silently into the dinghy. They were purposely landing on th wrong side of the island, in order to creep quietly over the creet of the hill, and descend to the beach without alarming their timid proy. Just a they cast off, out of the darkness came rushing an unlighted gunboat. With remarkable surenes and skill it got between them and the shore, put off a dinghy, and presently a strange voice was demanding "the permit." Alas! The party had everything but a permit. The corkscrew w as remembered, the pepper and salt not for-g otten, even desser a plates were provided, bu. no one had thought of getting permission to land on Chinese territory. The Puerile Jester suggested that the con-wain's certificate might do, but the Revenue officer would not be treated frivolously. Fortunately the Bea Lawyer, a man of many, many words, a man who, as the rest of the party subsequently discovered, is lequacious even in his sleep-he intervened with a telling harangne. He pointed out that the party consisted of the very foremost citizens of the Colony, that to suspect them of smnggling was an insult, that they were not at present at war with China, which was as fer their latest information went, a Friendly Power. Further, they stood upon their in alienable rights as provided in the Treaties, ignoring Chinese jurisdiction by virtue of their extraterritorial rights, and as missionaries insisting upon their right to go ashore. This, and much more, until the officer apparently decided to treat them all as hunation, and simply to take the first opportunity of reporting that they were at large. Whether a glimpse of the Pirate brandishing a capstan bar helped to expedite his departure, cannot be ductive of a prosperous calm. Seeing a Cuticura advertisement. I bought a set of the Cuticura Remedies and tried if it would be successful. They stopped the itching almost at once, but I only used one box of the Cuticura Cintment and one box of the Cuticura Resolvent Pills, and they took erery mark off me, leaving my skin clear and bright and stopped the hot irritation. I cannot speak too highly of Cuticura Remedies and I recommended them to several ladies who came out with nasty sores, and to three relatives whose babies had been troubled with rashes and crusts, and so make Cuticura known more. I think that Cuticura Remedies ought to be known well, as they would save many and heavy doctors' bills if used in time. Mrs. F. Popkin, 74 Glencoe Avenue, Seven Kings, Ilford, Sept. 8, 1906."

THE BANK OF ENGLAND'S SITE.

Is the Bank of England run on business lines? To those unfamiliar with the world of finance the question seems to be a piece of wild hereey. Yet there is a growing volume of opinion in London that the empire's greatest bank is as much behind the times as some of the Government departments. It wastes the value of the richest site in the British empire. Reckoning its value at £50 per squae foot, it has been computed that the bank site is worth £6,534,000.
